BRITAIN IS LOOKING ANXIOUSLY TOWARD MISERABLE SUNDAY

Possible Disturbances Saturday Night Causing Worry

SALOONS CLOSED IN EDINBURG

Armored Cars Moved From Army Base To Strategic Points

(Associated Press)

LONDON, May 8.—With minor disorders continuing throughout the country and no solution of the general strike in sight, Great Britain today looks for an anxious and miserable week-end.

The principal anxiety concerned the possibility of disturbances tonight when the men receive their slim strike benefits instead of the usual weekly pay envelopes.

The Edinburgh authorities closed the saloons this afternoon, but there were no reports of such action elsewhere. In London scores of trucks loaded of policemen were sent to those areas where trouble was most likely.

Armored cars were on the move from the army base.

Tomorrow will be the first Sunday in the country's history with a general strike in effect and the clergy is not expected to neglect the occasion of uttering words of advice.

Nothing in the way of peace can be expected before next week at the earliest, high labor officials say. The government continued to assert it had the situation well in hand.

Among the many small disturbances throughout the country the most persistent are at Glasgow. Gangs of hooligans worked methodically. Dispersed by mounted police, they soon reappear at other points and resume their rioting.

Police today raided an office in Watson street, Glasgow, seized pamphlets and arrested seven men on charges of sedition. At Crewe, a crowd rushed the railway offices when the officials refused to pay wages. The attackers were dispersed.

A number of telegraph and railway signal lines were cut between Newcastle and Hexham.

Sheffield Shopmen Fight Power Offer

(Associated Press)

SHEFFIELD, Ala., May 8.—More than 400 workers of the Southern shops in Sheffield moved to send a telegram to the representatives of Alabama in Washington, protesting the acceptance of the associated power company bid for Muscle Shoals, as a step against the people of the district and a furtherance of the power trust.

"We want our representatives in Washington to know," said Roy Kelly, secretary of the machinists union, "that organized labor in this district is unalterably opposed to the associated power bid as being a furtherance of a huge power trust and that it can bring no good to the people of Muscle Shoals on the South."

Efforts May Be Made To Cut Rate

As a result of the reports of small fire loss, made by the fire department during the past year, efforts soon may be made by Albany residents to obtain a reduction in insurance rates, including the elimination of the extra penalty in effect here.

Tax Exemptions May Be Granted

Earnest Morrow on behalf of the Decatur Brick Corporation appeared before the Albany city council last night, requesting consideration in the matter of tax exemption. The request was referred to the finance committee

Winston Churchill, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, has been appointed editor of the British Gazette, the official Government newspaper, which was placed into circulation with non-union printers when the general strike paralyzed the newspapers. NO ACTION TAKEN IN OFFICER'S CASE

Police Committee May Make Its Report Tuesday Night

No action was taken last night by the Albany city council on the status of M. J. Mitchell, traffic officer, it being stated at the city hall this morning a report might be made at a special session to be held Tuesday evening.

Discussion of allegations said to have been made against the officer consumed much time of the committee last night, but nothing was made public.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 8.—Bonds ranging from $300 to $500 today were fixed at a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Louise Charlton in the cases of 45 individuals arrested last night in one of the most sweeping prohibition raids ever recorded in Birmingham.

SEARCH TO BE MADE FOR JOHN ALLEN BY ALABAMA PAPERS

Missing Man Traced As Far South As Cullman

VETERAN OF SPANISH WAR

"Tell Him To Come Home," Is Message Of Wife Here

Search will be made in Alabama cities for John Allen, aged 53 years, who disappeared from his home in Fairview a week ago Thursday. It is indicated that the search will be made principally through Alabama newspapers.

Mrs. Ruth Allen declared today that search for her husband will not be made through police channels as she fears that her husband will resist any questioning through those sources. Mrs. Allen will remain at the home of friends in Albany until the missing man is located and sends for her, or returns to his home in Fairview.

In describing her husband, Mrs. Allen stated that he was well known in newspaper circles, having worked with the old Birmingham Ledger, the Age-Herald and the Post, in circulation capacity. She declared he wore a broad-brimmed hat when last seen. He has a sunken place on the left side of his forehead, caused from a wound received in the Spanish-American war. She said that he weighed about 150 pounds, was almost entirely bald and was known in Birmingham as "Foot and a Half," he having lost half of his left foot in a train wreck several years ago. She had traced him as far as Cullman and believed that he had traveled on to Birmingham and possibly farther south. Mrs. Allen and two children are remaining here in hopes that some word may be received from her husband.

Mrs. Allen asked that if her husband was located that the person or persons tell him that "Ruth would like to see him, wants him to come home." She believed his disappearance to be attributable to a shell-shocked condition, caused by the wound in the head.

Various Alabama newspapers will be addressed in an effort to locate the man.

THE world today is one little settlement, one newspaper tells it all one stock exchange covers it all, one danger affects it all. Wall Street, the Bourse in Paris and stocks in Berlin, all shiver together.

Nearly 5,000,000 workmen say to the British government, "you must be ruled by us, since we no longer trust you," and that is new in the world's history.

Men have risen against their rulers many times in the world's history, as the Gladiator slaves rose in Rome, or other slaves before them in Crete, the Jacquerie in France.

There have been revolutions, such as the French, only to be put down again.

MEAT ORDINANCE IS PASSED BY COUNCIL TO TUESDAY'S MEET

Albany Aldermen Will Take Up Measure at Special Session

MOYE PLEADS FOR PASSAGE

Representative Of The Junior C. of C. Asks Adoption

The Albany city council probably will take up the meat ordinance Tuesday evening, at a special meeting.

The ordinance was called up late last evening, in the regular meeting, and was discussed, but the measure was carried over until Tuesday evening.

Some objection has been manifest in the council to the provision granting exclusive rights for an abattoir and it was regarded as likely this provision would be eliminated.

A. L. Moye, representing the Junior Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the council last night, requesting the council to pass the ordinance, which also has been requested by the health department and other agencies.

The meat ordinance already has been passed on first reading by the Decatur council and it ultimately adopted in both cities will mean the establishment here of regulations for the slaughter of meat, the instruction of an abattoir and probably the location of a packing plant, which will market some meat products on the wholesale market.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY NETS BAG OF GOLD

Two Men Rob Woman In Busy Section Of Birmingham

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, May 8.—In a daringly executed mid-day hold-up two well dressed men halted an automobile driven by Mrs. J. S. Reed, and snatched a money bag containing a $1,245 payroll of Reed Brothers Stone Monumental Works.

The men escaped in an automobile. The robbery took place in the edge of the downtown area with scores of persons passing on all sides.

The robbers were unmasked and produced no weapons. They drove their car in front of the automobile occupied by Mrs. Reed and one of the men said:

"Lady, where is the money?" Mrs. Reed remonstrated in vain.

THE ENCIRCLING LOVE AND LOYALTY OF MOTHER

"And the man called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living." Gen. 3:20.

Barrie once described a lady by saying, "She had a mother's face." I. It is a magic name—Mother. No word in Anglo-Saxon has such power of suggestion; none is so packed with divine emotion. It is not strange that the name is associated with the Bible.

II. Your own mother may have been a humble working-woman in a cottage; while now you may be a learned man, dwelling in a palace. It matters not—her power and influence remain. Why did Lincoln say, "All that I am and all that I hope to be, I owe to my angel mother." Why do we remember the songs she sang? Why are her words still ringing in our ears, as clearly as if they had been spoken but yesterday? Why do we compare all woman-kind to that early model?

"There's a simple rural cottage that looks out across the sea; There's a rose-bush by the doorway, and a crooked apple tree; By the rose-bush, little Mater (so we called her) always sat; She called the spot her heaven, so I like to think of that."

III. It is because she possessed the eternal qualities of the lasting universe—love and goodness. She embodied elements that never die. When others scorned and abandoned us, she remained loyal. She covered our mistakes with a golden cloud of sympathy. She hid our failings in the folds of her long-suffering garments. She taught us that to be truly great is to be simply kind.

IV. He who has known such unfailing affection finds it easier to understand what Jesus meant when he said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—C. S. C.

TORNADO TAKES TOLL OF 2 LIVES

Wire Reports Fail To Estimate Damage In Section

(Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 8.—Two persons are known to have been killed and more than two score injured, three seriously in a tornado which swept eastern Oklahoma yesterday. Crippled wire service delayed reports from the stricken area.

Obra Tidwell, 73 and his 15 year old son were instantly killed at their farm home near Stiro in LeFlore county when they attempted to reach a storm cellar. Mrs. R. M. Masterson LeFlore county was brought to a Fort Smith hospital in a serious condition. Ral H. Brindley is in a Muskogee hospital with a fractured skull. A negro girl is reported near death at Morse.

Examination today revealed several of the injured suffered fractured skulls.

Mine Fire Throws Many Out of Work

(Associated Press)

JASPER, Ala., May 8.—Fire of undetermined origin early today at the Galloway coal company, at Holly Grove, accounted for loss estimated at $25,000 and has thrown more than 500 men out of employment.

The mammoth coal tippie and washer of the company was destroyed in the conflagration which had gained considerable headway before its discovery. Several cars, loaded with coal, and a number of tram cars were rolled to safety hurriedly and the determined effort of volunteer fire fighters prevented spread of the blaze.

Officials estimated it would require two months to rebuild the destroyed tippie and washer. Meanwhile 500 coal workers of Walker county are idle.

Many Men At Work On Two Highways

Probably more than 100 men now are at work on construction of two roads from here. One crew is at work on the road to Courtland, while several crews, totalling probably 75 men are engaged on the construction of the new highway from here to the Lawrence County line.

The right-of-way has been cleared for the Moulton road and culverts installed. Grading is being done now, beginning from the Lawrence County line and working this way. The road, when completed will be one of the finest in this section, virtually all of the sharp curves and steep grades being eliminated.

FIRE LOSS LOW DURING MONTH REPORT SHOWS

The fire loss in the City of Albany during the month of April was only one tenth of one per cent of all property endangered by blazes.

This remarkable report was submitted to the council last night by Fire Chief W. H. Sorber and testifies to the efficiency of his department.

During the month 30 calls were answered by the department, 23 reporting small losses, the total of these losses being only one tenth of one per cent.

FUND TO CONDUCT SANITATION FIGHT TO BE REQUESTED

$5,000 Additional Will Be Sufficient, Is McRee Estimate

MORTALITY RATE NOW TOO HIGH

Need For Work In The Rural Sections Is Seen By Official

With a plea of "save the babies" Dr. H. C. McRee, Morgan County health officer Monday will request the Morgan County board of revenue to appropriate an additional $5,000 per year to permit the inauguration of a campaign for sanitation in the rural districts.

Figures compiled by the department showed that the mortality rate among children two years of age and under in the rural sections of Morgan County, is approximately three times as high as the rate is in the Twin Cities where more attention is paid to sanitation.

Dr. McRee believes that the $5,000 fund will permit the department to complete its program of sanitation in all of the rural areas of this county.

During the five year period the Morgan County health department has been in operation there were 71 fever deaths from tuberculosis in this county, compared with the five year period preceding the beginning of organized health work, and excluding the "war years" when influenza was epidemic. During the same period there were 22 fever deaths from typhoid fever and 23 fever deaths from malaria fever.

Health authorities cite one instance when there were 11 primary cases of typhoid fever in this county, with 77 direct contacts. Of the latter number 87 were immunized by the use of serum. None of these took the disease. Ten refused the treatment, eight of whom became ill of the fever and four died. Two did not take the disease.

No tabulation was made of the mortality rate of infants due to preventable diseases, but a geographical tabulation, did reveal the startling ratio of deaths of infants in the rural and city areas, convincing health officers that a sanitation program was necessary.

The new building will be erected on the corner of Jackson street and Sixth avenue, the site of the present building.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, of the brood of "Shiftless Shannons," of northern Texas, has won a scholarship in the State University, and is beside herself with joy and gratification when she arrives at the capital, where the university is located. The family is poor and she is the only ambitious member of it. She has always longed for an education and to avoid the constant drudgery which has made life a burden to her mother.

And there was the library. She had never seen more books at one time than she could possibly read, and she was obsessed with something should happen before she could get round to them—lest the library be swallowed up or simply fold its tent in the night and steal away. She read greedily, indiscriminately, as of old; everything from the reports of the Society of Psychological Research to Tolstol, from Greek drama to Ibsen.

She did not go home at Christmas time. The long trip was too expensive. At the close of the spring term she secured a little school in a near-by village for the summer and sent the sorely needed salary home. It proved equally impossible for her to go home for the next Christmas holidays. Her scholarship sufficed only for actual expenses, and she had to squeeze out of it an occasional item of apparel, a dentist's bill, etc.

At the end of her sophomore year, she got some coaching in the university summer school and a class or two in a nearby "prep" academy. When the dormitory closed, she moved over to one of the girls' boarding houses opposite the campus. Mrs. Parker, the landlady, had a mere handful of table boarders left—ministers and faculty members whose wives had fled the August and September heat. She offered Molly board in return for a moderate amount of help. It would have been foolish, under the circumstances, to try to go home.

Many a reproachful twinge of conscience she suffered because she did not want to go home. Molly was not one of those blessed, well-born people who defer readily and gracefully to others. She was not more selfish perhaps than the normal, healthy young person, but franker about it. She was stubborn and head-strong, and above all things on earth she hated compromise.

Molly was nineteen now, lithe, willowy, not too tall, slim to a fault. The sunburn had faded from her skin, leaving it smoothly transparent with a dash of poppy petals underneath. Her eyes were of the same dazzling cornflower blue, her hair dusky black with a smoke-blue haze upon it—gifts both from her father's Celtic inheritance. A forehead not too high, but generously wide, winged black brows, a nose not very straight, a resolute but sensitive chin, mobile lips that matched the poppy hue in her cheeks, could quiver readily to laughter or tears—and usually did neither. Such, outwardly at least, was Molly on the eve of that memorable August.

CHAPTER V.

"Molly"—Mrs. Parker popped her head in at the door, and Molly guessed from certain crackly noises that she was in the act of buttoning herself into one of the stiff-starched dresses she always donned for the afternoon—"If you'd answer that pesky bell, if you don't mind." The whole of her trig little pine knot of a body came into Molly's room, still buttoning. She made a wry mouth and peered out over her steel-rimmed spectacles with mingled humor and concern. "It's the first of the month, you know, and I'm not at home!"

Molly smiled rather dabbly as she gave downward push to her own white frock, freshly laundered that very morning, and made an absent pass at her hair as she went by the mirror. Before she could reach the stairs there was another ring at the bell, louder this time and more insistent. She sighed. That was certainly a bill-collector ring. Dear Mrs. Parker, she was the soul of honesty. It was pitiful she should have to hide and dodge at this, even if she did make her little jest. And Molly didn't like to tell a lie.

"Mrs. Parker is not in," she announced with cool impartiality, one hand reaching suggestively for the door knob.

"No, really . . ." The voice was deep and regretful and very masculine.

She still did not look up. "No, but if you care to come back—say a week or two from now—'But, my dear young lady—' The tall figure stepped across the narrow aperture left by the gently but firmly closing door. His tone was argumentative, plaintively humorous. The smile that went with it was wasted on Molly, however, for her eyes were fixed on a spot exactly two feet above the door knob. "What am I to do in the meantime?"

"The door edged a trifle closer. 'I don't know, I'm sorry—'

"But your hotel here is quite impossible," the persuasive, deep voice went on injudiciously, "and I'm told on the best of authority that Mrs. Parker's meals—"

"Oh . . . !" The door and Molly's cornflower eyes flew open startledly and simultaneously. "You don't mean you're a boarder?"

The stranger looked entertained. "Of course. What did you think?"

Molly deemed it prudent not to answer that question at once. Instead, she piloted the way toward the shabby but immaculate little parlor. At the door the prospective boarder stood aside with an easy deference, which implied yet a subtle compliment.

"Too bad Mrs. Parker is not in," he settled himself in the chair she indicated and laid the folder on the table—she could see now it was the sort professors carried. With a resigned grimace, he mopped at his brow. "I'm afraid your climate is to be recommended only for salamanders," he said.

Molly had never given the climate a thought, but she felt sorry he was displeased about anything. "It does get hot in the afternoons," she admitted. Then she explained quickly that Mrs. Parker was in. "It's the first of the month, you see, and we couldn't be sure—"

"Hum-m . . ." The stranger threw back his beautiful dark head and laughed—this time aloud. "You took me for a bill collector, eh?" She moved quickly to the door, with some murmur about "calling Mrs. Parker"; got out of the room as swiftly as decorum would permit. She was intensely conscious of his eyes riveted with casual, detached interest on her back. No doubt he had noted the very pined place in her skirt! She paused at Mrs. Parker's door, retailed briefly the business in hand, then ran on up to her own room.

The arrangement with Mrs. Parker did not include any waiting on the table—sufficient comment on that discerning little woman's kindness of heart. But the next morning, the first new boarder was to appear. Molly made some excuse to stay in the kitchen until the others were through. As the breakfast hour drew near, dread had increased to positive panic. How could she ever look at him again?

"Molly, you run 'long and eat now," Mrs. Parker advised, bustling into the kitchen with a towering pyramid of plates. There were not enough boarders to justify keeping on her servants, and she acted as both cook and waitress. "I'll be in directly."

Molly, who had been cooking waffles, tossed off her apron, pushed back the hair from her hot face, and went toward the dining room—exquisitely cool and inviting after the broiling kitchen. On the threshold she brought up short, one hand to her heart, which pounded smotheringly. She was just turning to fly when a deep voice observed from the depths of a newspaper: "Good morning. It's no use running, you know, because I've seen you already!" A leisurely motion of the paper indicated the sideboard mirror opposite.

The new boarder—he was the only one left in the room—looked round quizzically as Molly hesitated in the doorway. He rose, pulled out the chair across from him, steered her toward it, adjusted her at precisely the right angle. "There," he said, setting the fern dish to one side. "What could be more charming? And how very nice of you to wait and keep me company!"

Molly's colorful face whitened a little, the tide of shame and anger started mounting again. "I didn't," she said. "I supposed that every

WHY ALL THE HUSTLE AGAINST HEALTH?

Danish Visitor Finds Americans Overdo Work, So Unnecessary With All Our Machinery, Leaving No Time for Relaxation.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A GREAT big Viking, a Danish giant, has been visiting America. The other day he told a reporter what is wrong with our country: "Overwork is really the curse of the whole world. But it reaches the zenith in America."

He goes on to say: "Lives of the people who are leading the pace required by the present-day economic pressure are being shortened by at least ten years. They are middle-aged when they should still be young."

Our Danish visitor has a remedy: "People should have more time for recreation and relaxation. The spirit of play should be diffused. There should be more holidays. I think a mid-week holiday every week would be a good idea. In this mechanical age where, with machines, every man is doing the work of four or five or even dozens, such an arrangement would not seriously disorganize industry."

Then our philosopher concludes: "After all, we don't know where we are going, so why hurry?"

Well, well! That's that! I hate a loafer. I can't bear people who are indifferent, lackadaisical, and shiftless.

But, on the other hand, there is nothing to admire in a busybody, in these bustling, bustling, always hurried and excited persons who travel in a peck-measure. They create excitement enough, but they never arrive anywhere.

Why can't we educate our children to be sensible in their use of time and in their application to work?

The English are saner in their view and practice of life than we Americans. They work hard, but they do not overlook the importance of leisure. They begin later and stop earlier than we do. They walk, play cricket, ride, row, cultivate their beautiful flowers and think less of their complexities than they do of their health.

Once in a while you meet an American, a professional or business man, who won't work Wednesday or Saturday afternoon. Golf or some other out-of-door pastime is a religious observance. His wins as many lawsuits, saves as many patients, makes as good bridges, and lays aside as much money as his feverish and hysterical brother who rushes through life as if he were catching the last train.

No, I don't practice all the teachings I give you. But, dear reader, I know the rules of life. If you will follow these precepts you will have stronger hearts, softer arteries, more hair, better appetites, sweeter sleep, clearer skins and longer lives. Please do as the Danish philosopher said I advise you to do!

Supremacy in Fine Steel

In the percentage of Cost! Chrome Vanadium Steel used, Dodge Brothers Motor Car outranks any other automobile in the World, regardless of cost.

It is everywhere conceded that Chrome Vanadium Steel is the toughest and most enduring metal ever created for use in the vital parts of a motor car.

It may not be so well known, however, that Dodge Brothers Motor Car ranks first in the world in the use of this costly and fatigue-proof material.

Dodge Brothers power assembly is almost entirely Chrome Vanadium—motor, connecting rods, crankshaft, transmission, universal joint, drive shaft, differential and rear axle.

Even the front axle is Chrome Vanadium—the entire steering unit—and every leaf of the springs.

In fact, wherever any manufacturer uses alloy steels, Dodge Brothers use costly Chrome Vanadium. And in numerous instances Dodge Brothers employ it where plain carbon steel, even in the costliest cars, is commonly thought sufficient.

This has been true from the day Dodge Brothers built their first motor car.

This explains why the words Long Life, Safety and Dependability are habitually associated with the name Dodge Brothers wherever motor cars are serving mankind.

12 Years Ago From the Daily of TODAY

May 8, 1914

The cannon presented by General Joseph Wheeler today is mounted in Wheeler park.

The Phoenix club will present a minstrel program the latter part of this month.

Wallace Gover is confined to his home with an attack of malaria.

Miss May Finnie will leave Sunday for an extended visit to relatives in Kentucky.

Mrs. A. D. Cohen is visiting her mother in Gadsden.

It should be remembered that our own virtues are not so clearly outlined to others when we enter an argument.

The British general strike continues, perhaps there is still enough food in the United kingdom to go around.

Dreams of fat incomes might come true if there happened to be more than dreams.

The adoption of Mrs. Waite by George Foster Peabody brings to mind another putrid pun—"everything comes to those who wait."

HUNTSVILLE TIMES SEES INDICATIONS OF IMMEDIATE DEVELOPMENT HERE

Really men the world over usually are the quickest to sense development of a community, a county or a state. It is their business to know which way development is headed. The numerous inquiries received from really men about the Tennessee Valley is interpreted by the Huntsville Daily Times as one of the most encouraging features of the present situation.

The Times says.
One of the surest signs in the world that the outside world is interested and headed this way finds conclusive evidence in the fact that outside realtors are inquiring about this section with a view to establishing offices here. The city already has a number of splendid realtors and with the coming of others it goes without saying that mother earth is going to pick up both in values and transfer throughout this section. The finest thing of it all is, as we see it has to do with the interest outsiders are taking in this section. It all means more people, more money and more industry for the community. For our part we are ready to see general local development step off in high. It has been making splendid progress but the faster it goes the better it suits us because it will mean more prosperity for you.

There is no disputing the fact that many realtors are evidencing interest in the Tennessee Valley. Real estate agents here very frequently are in receipt of requests for information of one kind or another in regard to this section. In the Tri-Cities a number of large realty companies already have located and, judging from the list of transfers published, are doing a lively business.

The long looked for "boom" in the Valley appears to be nearer than most of us had thought.

ONE WAY TO REMOVE PARDON POWER FROM POLITICS WOULD BE TO REMOVE IT ENTIRELY

The Daily is reasonably sure that it is not the only newspaper grown tired of the constant controversies over pardons and paroles.

The Daily is not without cognizance of the fact that governors frequently are the "goats" in such controversies. Very frequently it is the case that an application for executive clemency is accompanied by strong endorsements of well-known and law-abiding persons residing in the home community of the applicant and, for that reason, supposed to know considerable more of the details of the case than the governor, himself. Yet, rarely are those who sign such application known, and more rarely are they criticized. The governor, perforce, is called upon to bear the brunt of the adverse criticism when it falls.

Naturally an executive does not care for his position. In other instances a governor, if he so desired, could issue pardons or paroles in such numbers as to bring almost to naught the actual trials by jury.

An executive who would resort to such tactics would bring down on his own head the condemnation of his fellow-citizens and probably would be a dead letter politically, thereafter. The law prevents a governor from succeeding himself, however.

Pleas have been made for removal of the pardoning power from its political environment. As if it could be done. So long as candidates are forced to campaign for office, and then, when elected, utilize or fail to utilize one of the prerogatives of that office, just so long will the pardoning power have a political tinge.

We can, if we so desire, remove the pardoning power from politics, by removing it altogether.

In place of the present board, the supreme court, or some section of it, could review applications for clemency, ordering new trials when the court is convinced by presentation of new legal evidence that the accused has been done an injustice.

That would make jurors what they were intended to be

Judges of the guilt or innocence of persons brought into court for trial.

DR. HARPER GIVES SPLENDID ADVICE TO THE PEOPLE OF LAWRENCE COUNTY

Dr. R. E. Harper, Lawrence county health officer, is doing a splendid work for the people of that county, especially just now in seeking to acquaint them with the habits of mosquitoes, separating the latter into the classifications of malaria-bearing and those which are not. In a recent statement in the Moulton Advertiser he asks, and answers, some of the more common questions about mosquitoes as follows:

- (a) Q. Do both male and female mosquitoes bite?
A. No. The female bites, the male does not bite.
- (a) Q. Can you describe the head of a mosquito?
A. All mosquitoes have a bill and two palpi, which lie close to it, one on each side. Outside the palpi are two antennae which spread apart. The antennae of the male are plumelike. Those of the female are not.
- (a) Q. How then can you tell the male from the female?
A. The male has "plumes on his head."
- (a) Q. How can you tell the Anopheles, malaria-bearing mosquitoes from the Culex and other kinds in the United States which do not convey malaria?
A. One way is by their heads. Anopheles have straight bills and palpi nearly as long as their bills. The female of the other kinds have short palpi, except one kind which has a curved bill. The males of both Culex and Anopheles have long palpi, and one can not tell the species of the males in this way.
- (a) Q. Are there any other differences?
A. The malarial mosquito is slight and graceful. The wings are generally spotted or dusky.
- (a) Q. Is there any other differences to note?
A. Yes. The way of resting on a wall. Anopheles rests in a straight line, frequently standing on her head. The others rest "humped up." This is the only way to tell the live mosquito, and is the one usually used in practice.
- (a) Q. Can you tell something of her habits while feeding—on man, I mean?
A. She rarely bites in the daytime in the United States. The day mosquito of the South is Aedes calopus—the yellow fever mosquito. Anopheles is shy and easily driven off, and will rarely bite one who is moving about, hence is most apt to bite one who is asleep. Her biting is less painful than that of other mosquitoes, and she does not sing so loudly. On this account, when mosquitoes are much complained of they are rarely Anopheles, and there can be many Anopheles about without much complaint.

R. E. HARPER, M. D.

County Health Officer.

The mosquito furnished a problem most important to the people of the South and especially to the people of the Tennessee Valley. This climate primarily is healthy. This statement can be borne out by high authority, despite the views of some iconoclasts who profess to believe that all area south of the Mason-Dixon line is "malaria country" and therefore unhealthy.

There may have been a time when malaria was prevalent in the Tennessee Valley, and there are some cases of it every year now; but thanks to the good work of the health units of the several North Alabama counties, and the education of the people to malaria prevention, the disease now is fully under control and rapidly being stamped out.

It is in the continuation of this work that the people of Morgan and every other Valley county should be tremendously interested. Mosquitoes can be eliminated in the same ratio that efforts are put forth to eliminate them. By oiling of stagnant water and constantly watching for potential breeding places, the health work can be brought to a stage where few, if any, breeding places are possible for the pests.

Inasmuch as the malaria mosquito is the most prolific agency in the spread of malaria, the conclusion that when we are rid of the mosquito, we are rid also of malaria is a logical one.

If the Tennessee Valley today was invaded by an armed host, there is not a man, woman or child who would not offer resistance to the bitter end. Yet, for many years the people of the Valley suffered the annual invasion of the dangerous mosquito pest and only in late years has actual, organized resistance been offered.

It would not be amiss for every reader of The Daily to study the statement made by Dr. Harper. Information about an opponent and the habits of the latter frequently give one considerable advantage. It should in the present instance.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS for the Sabbath and Other Days

(By J. E. BLAIR)

King Lea berates his daughters; the mother of Richard III rails upon her son: "Thou comest into the world to make my world a hell." Germanicus is dragged through the cess pools of the eternal city by his sons, Agrippina and Caligula. Antonius is reduced to the itching dust of shame by Commatus, his son. William, the Conqueror, had to engage in deadly combat with Robert, the Norman. Gloster, the victim of one son, curses another son. Those people not known to have professed belief in the living God may have felt no remorse of conscience—though they knew that the sins of the fathers are visited upon their sons—but as Eve wept over dead Abel, she knew how she and Adam had eaten the sour fruit of sin. Noah weeping over his son Ham in the full knowledge that Ham must be "the servant of servants" suffered in the knowledge that his own drunkenness was back of it all.

David saw the wind-blown dead body of Absalom hanging by the once beautiful hair, and wept but with the father's tears was mingled the bitter thought that with murdered Uriah's wife he had tasted the sour grape of sin! Aye be sure your sin will find you!

But is it right that the cold clammy hands of those who are dead should reach from the grave to trip us in the race? Is it right that we should be a kind of "Omnibus" in which ride uninvited the characters of ancestors not of our choosing? To answer that question I will say that God made us free will agents. Beyond that statement no person, philosopher though he be, is permitted to go! Did God have a right to make us free enough to dawn our souls? No, that is to say unless He had prepared a way of escape "from the body of this death." But He did prepare a way. Before the foundation of the earth Christ was. His atonement has always been EFFECTIVE, for all who looked forward to His cross and for all who look backward to His cross. Abraham rejoiced in the coming Christ; Dives might have done so but he elected otherwise. Through Christ we are offered NEW PERSONALITIES—those that hate sin. Do we want them, or shall we continue in sin? God forbid. Where sin and the disposition to sin abound, Christ's grace doth much more abound. Paul thought Christ could deliver him from "the body of this death." Do you?

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

cessful for a time, as when the French revolution paved the way for Napoleon, and for rule by organized money instead of by organized soldiers.

THIS industrial civil war in England has able, earnest, educated and honest men leading. You sympathize with both sides—with Baldwin the premier, devoted to the empire and the welfare of the British and, with Ramsay MacDonald, equally sincere, and determined that the masses of the people, after the great war's sacrifices, shall have better conditions.

MacDONALD'S tone is conciliatory, but there is an ugly ring to the statement of his associate, J. H. Thomas, head of the Railway union, "Let us not lose our heads, whatever wreck it may bring." The wreck would not be for any one class and the hungry children would be the children of working men, not of the aristocracy.

There is ugly fighting and there may be more of it, and uglier. But there will be no "butcheries of aristocracy" as in France in the eighteenth century or in Russia and other day. That is not the British character.

THE losses to Britain will be gigantic and values cut down for a long period. Striking workers alone will lose $12,000,000 a day in wages.

The direct cause justifies the strike among workmen everywhere, and helps the game of foreign agitators, if such are involved as is alleged.

Owners of coal mines that do not work, the greatest among them having inherited in idleness, coal deposits millions of years old, announced that they would cut wages 13-13 per cent and increase the hours of labor from 7 to 8 per day wiping out concessions made to the workers when the war ended, and the cost of food went up.

IN the Irish crisis long ago, the British simplified their problem by notifying Irish land owners that they must sell to the Irish farmers at cheap prices, fixed by the government on long credit, government financing the transactions. The farmers made their lands pay.

The same thing may be done with coal owners, much as organized finance hates government operation, or ownership. Of course individual miners could not own and operate parts of coal mines, as Irish farmers work their land. Groups of miners might try, but would probably not succeed in making of mining a commercial success.

Thus the government would be forced to undertake the work. But that would be only one step, railroads would come next, other industries would follow.

IT was proved in the French revolution that the only way to content and aroused people was to let own their lands. It may be shown in England, where lands are less valuable and not able to support the population, that the only way to content an angry industrial nation is to let that nation own its industries, as the French, Swedish and Russian peasants own the soil.

This strike will tell more about that.

ENGLAND'S difficulty is lack of opportunity for all her ambitious men. Imagine Great Britain's population of from 42 to 43 millions crowded into a country a little more than half the size of California, with one tenth of California's fertility.

Such a country cannot feed its population or supply openings for all the ambition developed there. More of it must go to Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and the rest of the world. The British people should be more anxious to keep those territories for "overflow" than to fight each other in their little "main office" on the foggy northeast coast of Europe.

BRITISH aristocracy is divided into their utter fools and remarkably able statesmen and thinking men. The utter fools are already holding Lloyd George responsible for today's troubles, saying he has arrayed class against class, arousing dissatisfaction with his attack on the aristocratic monopoly of unused land.

They forget that, had it not been for Lloyd George, they wouldn't have any British government problem. Without him the Kaiser or one of his sons would be looking after this strike, attending to it with machine guns carefully located in Trafalgar Square, at the Marble Arch and other useful points

AMERICAN high finance is worried, as usual. The latter your white rabbit, the more timid. Fat keeps him from running.

But there is nothing to worry the United States except its own foolish fears.

In New Jersey on the Atlantic the cheerful Charles M. Schwab, tells this country it needn't worry. "Having one sixth of the world's money."

At San Francisco on the Pacific Herbert Fleishacker, the head of a great bank with dealings all over the world, said yesterday, "A bad situation, but the British will work their way out, as they always do. Nothing to worry this country."

THE best words came from Baldwin, Britain's able, earnest premier, at the end of what seemed a discouraged speech in the house of commons.

Everything I cared for is smashed to bits. Only faith and courage remain. Faith and courage are enough and will solve any problem.

Goethe wrote, "Courage gone, everything gone, better thou wert never born."

Amusements

At Princess Theater Monday and Tuesday.

Many charming costumes that will be relished by women the country over are worn by Florence Vidor in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," a sophisticated French love comedy, directed by Malcolm St. Clair.

As a haughty Grand Duchess, forced to flee to Paris with a vestige of her court, following the rise of revolutionists in her home country, Miss Vi-dor has an opportunity to wear twelve distinctly different gowns. These gowns, especially designed by Howard Greer, fashion creator at the Paramount West Coast studio, are strikingly rich and attractive.

While Miss Vidor's beautiful costumes have long been a notable feature in all productions in which she has been seen, they are more than usually gorgeous in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

The featured male lead in the cast of this de luxe production, which was adapted from Alfred Savoir's stage play of the same name by Pierre Collings, is Adolphe Menjou.

INJUNCTION GRANTED WOMAN AGAINST PASTOR'S ATTENTION

Minister Plans To Preach Sunday Service On The "Sanctity Of The Home"

(Associated Press)
MONROE, Mich., May 8—Reverend William R. Curtis, pastor of the First Baptist church, plans to preach a Mother's Day sermon on the 'Sanctity of the Home,' he said, to fight a temporary injunction granted Thursday to Mrs. Iva M. Bryan, a member of his church, preventing him from annoying her with his attentions. The minister said he probably would refer to the injunction in his sermon.
Mrs. Bryan in her petition for an injunction, said she first became acquainted with the minister in August 1924, and that he had visited her at her home frequently to discuss church and lodge work. The visits, she charges, became so frequent, they caused gossip and when she and later her husband asked the minister to cease to come to her home, he refused.
Rev. Mr. Curtis denies the charges and says he will fight to have the injunction dissolved to "clear his name." The minister said he did not think he would file counter charges against Mr. Bryan, but his attorney, Edgar C. Gordon, intimated such action might be necessary, "to prove the false fabric of her allegation."

After the injunction was granted, Mrs. Bryan left town, her attorney, James J. Kelly, said she had postponed the action for sometime in hope that the minister would accept warnings given him.

PALE, NERVOUS

West Virginia Lady Says That She Was in a Serious Condition, But Is Stronger After Taking Cardui.

Huntington, W. Va.—"I was in a very weak and run-down condition—in fact, was in a serious condition," says Mrs. Fannie C. Bloss, of 1964 Madison Avenue, this city. "In my left side the pain was very severe. It would start in my back and sides. Part of the time I was in bed and when up I didn't feel like doing anything or going anywhere."

"Life wasn't any pleasure. I was very pale. I was nervous and thin, and so tired all the time. "My druggist told me that Cardui was a good tonic for women and I bought a couple of bottles. I took two bottles, then I noticed an improvement. I kept on and found it was helping me. I have taken nine bottles. I'm stronger now than I have been in a long time."

Cardui is made from mild-acting medicinal herbs with a gentle, tonic, strengthening effect upon certain female organs and upon the system in general.

The meeting was opened by the scout oath the roll was called and showed 24 present. Dr. C. C. Davison gave us a splendid talk on "A Scout is Obedient." He also read the scripture. The "Flying Eagle" patrol had the program. The first on the program was a debate. Resolved that pie is better than pudding, the affirmative side won. Second was a guessing contest, won by Gus Hildreth. They then had a play which was very interesting. The characters were, Tom Griffin, father, Harold Praytor, mother, Fred Hunt, daughter, W. F. Frazier and Reder Banks lovers and John Jones villain. We then had some setting up exercises. The meeting was closed by repeating the allegiance to the flag.

Miss Louise Neill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. A. The annual rites included the Maypole dances, formation of human numerals on the campus, "step singing" in front of the chapel building and hoop-rolling. The senior class formed long lines on each side of the road, leading to the chapel, beating their hoops to the time of the marching song, while members of the lower classes, gowned in white, marched down the living lane.

The statement was greeted with vocal approval from a large portion of the delegates and from that time, until he finished reading, the conference was in an uproar many delegates shouting "amen" and many others voicing disapproval.

SPORTS

Barons Run Up Winning Streak To Six; Yanks End Losing Streak As Babe Clouts

Birmingham is easily the best club in the Southern league, is the opinion of fans today as the Barons lined up for the seventh try at victory. The Barons corps has waded through Memphis and Little Rock opposition in the past week something awful, grabbing five verdicts in as many days. They won last Sunday, too, making it a total of six in a row. Today they battle in the series finale with the Pebbles. The Barons in the week have moved from the mediocre column to the places occupied by the 400 of baseball. The Barons are making a terrific chase to be in the first line trench by June, thoroughly entrenched and daring anyone to challenge the honor.

Grant Gillis continues to be a factor in Barons triumphs, coming through yesterday with a stellar performance afield and two hits for raising his clubbing average. The gentleman from Alabama is indeed potent when he gets right.

Babe Ruth pulled his sixth home run stunt yesterday at the Polo grounds yesterday to aid in breaking the Yankee losing streak against Detroit 7-6. The Babe got back into the lineup after his injury in a collision with Lazzeri when they both started chasing a fly ball. The Yanks are climbing at the top, despite the fact that they have run into stiff opposition.

Washington continued to stamper the American league yesterday when Sir Walter Johnson got busy against the White Sox and kept ten hits scattered for an 8-2 victory. Goose Goslin continued his batting rampage with a perfect day, getting a trio of blows in as many appearances at the plate. The victory shoved the White Sox out of second place.

John McGraw, veteran mentor of the New York Giants, will stick with that club for the next three years, it was learned today as the veteran master mind stuck his signature to a three year contract. McGraw's contract expires in the spring and it has been hinted that he would drop active interest in baseball circles.
